Why do we collect personal data about you and what do we do with it?

Job applicant data is collected for the following purposes:

- Job applicant selection and analysis
- Contacting job applicant about recruitment process
- Reporting and follow-up of recruitments
- For possible open positions in the future (with applicant's own consent)
- To ensure the suitability and reliability of the employees hired

We assess the information you have given to us and identify the most suitable persons for the open positions. We use the information to contact you and schedule interviews, and to inform you about the progress and outcome of the recruitment process. The given information may also be used for a personal assessment, which the final candidates of a recruitment are invited to have.

Fennovoima has, according to the Finnish Act on Personal Security Clearances (726/2014), an obligation to perform a personnel security clearance (i.e. background check) on all its employees. Therefore, if you are selected to one of our positions, we will ask you to obtain a security clearance as a precondition for the employment, and to take part in an occupational health examination and a drug screen test.

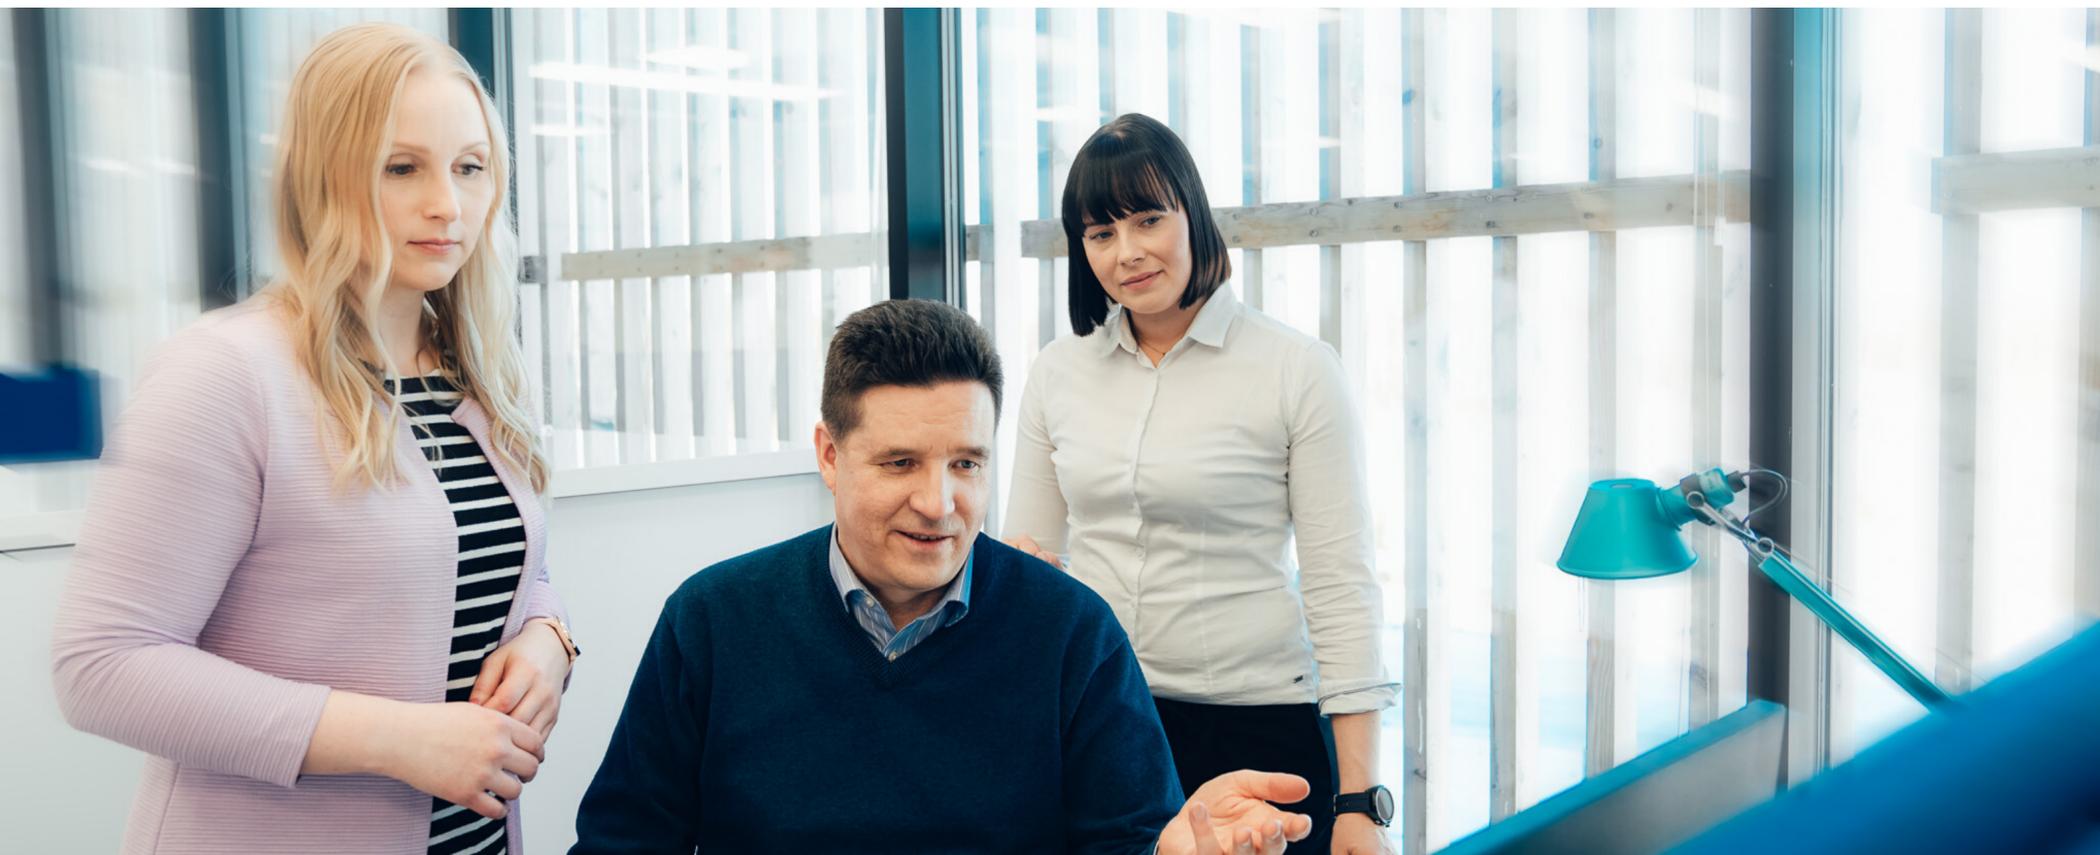

The processing of personal data is based on your consent and Fennovoima's legitimate interest to validate the competence and reliability of its potential employees.

What personal data do we collect about you?

The following personal data is collected about you:

- Basic information: Name, date of birth, home address, phone number, email address
- Previous experience & education: information given in your CV, job application form, LinkedIn-profile (if link given by applicant)
- Personal assessment reports: The report consists of description of the candidate's current employment, professional and educational background, motivation towards the applied position and Fennovoima, candidate's strengths and development areas compared to the position's requirements and the conclusion of the assessment consultant. The report also includes a visual candidate profile regarding the working and social style as well as a career direction forecast.
- Reference calls: Calls to referees are made only with applicant's consent. Name, notes related to candidate's performance in earlier jobs, strengths and development areas may be recorded.
- Information needed for the signing of an employment contract: Name, social security number, salary and benefits, trial period, notice period, employment start date, duration of employment contract, working time and overtime, working place, annual holiday, collective agreement
- Security clearance and drug test: Regarding selected candidates we will ask you to take a drug test and to consent to a security screening. After the drug test and security screening, we store the information that you have done these tests and what was the result.

We collect the information mainly from the candidates themselves, but we are using also external partners to handle the interviews, for personal assessments and for finding potential candidates.

FENNOVOIMA

For how long do we store your personal data?
